

BEAUTIES IN THE MOVIES

Enid Markey was a Denver society girl when a traveling company playing "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway" decided to recruit its chorus from the Colorado city's social circle. Miss Markey and several of her intimates appeared as candidates and were selected. This ended the plans of her parents to send her to Leland Stanford Jr. university. She made her debut in the movies in August, 1914, and has risen rapidly to the circle of leading women in the Triangle drama. She had the leading part with Dustin Farnum in "The Iron Strain." This honor was hers because her work with William S. Hart in "The Darkening Trail," for which she was selected from the group of minor players in Ince's permanent company. Her recent success in "Aloha Oe" with Willard Mack is a guarantee that she will never return to minor parts.

—o—o—o—
Icing of refrigerating cars will be dispensed with by the invention of a new system by which the warm air is pumped out of the cars and replaced with cold.